

What sound does Sammy usually make in words? Yes, he likes to hiss 'sss...' very loudly. How does Harry Hat Man feel about noise? That's right, he hates it! So what do you think happens when Sammy comes slithering and sliding up behind Harry in a word? Do you think he will put up with all that noise? Absolutely not! He turns back and says "sh!" to hush Sammy up.

Sammy came slithering up behind Harry at the seashore today, hissing loudly, so Harry had to say "sh!" again. Sammy and Harry like to sit in the sunshine and look at all the things by the shore. They can see shells, shrimps and fish in the sea. Those fish should keep a sharp eye out for that shark in the shallow water!

Can you see the shepherd shearing his sheep? There are four shy sheep who don't want to be sheared. Can you find them for him?

ship shell sheep shark

© Letterland International Ltd All rights reserved.

When Tess and Harry get together in words you'll hear either the unvoiced th sound in think, or the voiced th sound, as in there.

Talking Tess spends a lot of time making her tiny 't...' sound in many words. But have you ever noticed that Tess and Harry Hat Man make a completely different sound when they're together?

Talking Tess blames it on the weather – especially thunderstorms.

Talking Tess loves the thunderstorms, but Harry hates them – they're so loud! So Talking Tess hurries up to Harry to comfort him as she says, "There, there. It's only the thunder!"

Tess and Harry are hurrying home from the theatre to get away from the thunder. Nobody else seems bothered by the thunder.

The thrushes are thirsty so they are still in their bird bath. The girl on the throne hasn't put away her thimble and thread yet, and the athlete by the thatched cottage is still throwing his javelin.

Thankfully, I think the thunder won't last more than thirty seconds!

there

three

thirty

thunder

thumb